Description:

Very rare separately published map of the southern part of Ukraine, published by the Royal Academy in St. Petersburg.

The map provides a detailed account of the battles between the Russian and Turkish Armies. The map was later copied in Augsburg by Seutter, but this is the original, which includes a number of subtle differences.

The map illustrates the military operations by the Russian Imperial Army along the Don and Dnieper Rivers in 1736, a notable period during the Russo-Turkish Wars.

Key Translation and Contextualization:

A. Der Dnieper Strom - The Dnieper River: A vital geographical feature, illustrating the natural barrier and strategic route for military and trade activities in Eastern Europe.

B. Die Ukrainische Linie - The Ukrainian Line: Refers to the fortifications or demarcation lines in the Ukrainian territory, significant for its role in the defense strategies against the Ottoman Empire.

C. Der Donetz - The Donets River: Indicates another crucial waterway, highlighting its importance for logistical movements and as a natural defense line.
