Description:

Decorative large format map of the island of Jamaica, divided by parishes, published in Augsburg by Seutter.

The cartouche depicts natives harvesting, processing and curing sugar cane along with sea turtles and a mermaid observing it all.

The map shows the importance of the English Colony of Jamaica in the mid-18th century and includes topographical features, soundings in the southern harbors and a host of other details. At the top right, there is a lengthy annotation in German.

One of the most decorative maps of Jamaica to appear in a commercial atlas in the 18th century.
