Description:

Striking plan of London and environs, which was first published by Johannes De Ram in Amsterdam.

The map includes a 10 point key in the top left corner bearing the names of Southwark landmarks, and a 148 point key in the top-right bearing the names of locations on the other side of the Thames. The smaller title contained in a classical cartouche surmounted by the arms of London with dragon supporters.

Originally Joannes de Ram's map celebrated William and Mary's ascent to the English throne after the Glorious Revolution, giving the country a Dutch monarch. For this state the original portraits have been replaced with a view of Westwood Park, Worcestershire and appeared in Vander Aa's La Galerie Agréable du Monde: Grande Bretagne et L'Irlande.
