Description:

One of the earliest obtainable separately published maps of Mexico, based on the work of Abraham Ortelius.

The map is filled with early place names for towns, rivers, mines, mountains, etc. Text at lower right gives information about places numbered on map, text at upper right gives information about the whole country. Both texts are in Latin, with strapwork borders.

Quad's map of Mexico is among the earliest obtainable modern maps of Mexico, which was first mapped by Ruscilli in 1561 and later refined by Ortelius in the following decade. Quad's work is relatively scarce on the market, by comparison to other maps of the late 16th Century, and is packed full of detail and information.
