Description:

Fine large format map of the Northeast, at the end of the War of 1812, published by Pinkerton.

Large detailed map of the Northeastern United States, from the District of Maine to Michigan, Ohio, Virginia and Delaware, including most of the Upper Chesapeake and the Washington DC area.

This example of the map reflects a number of errors in the outline coloring of the states, including a complete miss on New Hampshire and Vermont, a big miss on the northern New York State Boundary with Canada, and southern boundary (placing Manhattan in New Jersey), missed boundaries for Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts, inaccurate depiction of the northwestern corner of Virginia and a complete miss on the Delaware-Maryland Boundary.

Highly detailed map, with one of the earliest appearances of Michigan Territory. Many early forts still appear in Ohio, Michigan and the Western part of Pennsylvania and Virginia. Indiana appears south of the Ohio River in Virginia, near Vienna. Ohio is also named Western Territory. The Maine-Canada Boundary disputes are still not resolved. The map names early counties, towns, Indians, etc.

Pinkerton's maps are highly detailed and larger format than contemporary maps by Cary and Thomson, and are prized for their precision and detail.
