Description:

First stat of this important early map of Friesland, based upon Jacob van Deventer's map of 1545.

Camoccio's map is the was issued shortly after the map of Roman mapmaker, Michele Tramezzino, which in turn was the earliest surviving map based upon Jacob van Deventer's 6 sheet map of Friesland. From historical sources it is known that van Deventer spent some time in Friesland between 1544 and 1545, during which time he created the first modern map of the region.

The first definitivley known printed edition of the map was made in Antwerp in 1559: a large version in six sheets, by Bernard van den Putte. It is possible that this may be the reprint of the mysterious Van Deventer of 1545. The map survived in 1 example in the Wroclaw library, until it was destroyed during the Second World War.

The first surviving derivation of van Deventer's work is one of the small maps on a single sheet with
