Description:

Franco-Era Governmental Map

A nice map of the Anso region of Spain produced in 1954 by the Geographic and Cadastral Institute of Spain. This map was likely produced for administrative use and contains a robust amount of detail for the region's topography, infrastructure, and terrain (such as if an area is forested, plains, developed, etc.). The roads, rivers, and electric lines that connect the region are illustrated as well.

The map features demographic data for Anso. This is seen in the key which has a section dedicated to "Labor." Presumably, this section shows population centers and areas that could be mobilized to provide support in crisis. The chart's representation of this data reflects the administrative capacity this map was created for.

Detailed Condition:

Tear to extremities on left-hand side. Slight tears on right as pictured. Some foxing above upper neatlines. Toning along top corners.
