Description:

From An Atlas Designed To Educate A Future King of England

A decorative map of easternmost France and northern Italy during classical antiquity, containing ample notes regarding the region's past classical histories. A second, smaller map of Calabria and part of Sicily is also included. All cities and geographical features are shown with their Latin names.

The map includes a decorative title cartouche and the royal coat of arms.

This map was part of a special geographical text dedicated to the Duke of Gloucester, who was then attending school in Oxford. Unfortunately, the Duke would die at age 11.
