Description:

Alexis Hubert Jaillot's map of England and Wales, published in 1693, is a stunning example of French cartography from the late 17th century.

The map is colored in outlined by counties. At the center of the map is a decorative cartouche, which features an elaborate coat of arms in an allegorical scene. The cartouche is richly detailed, with intricate scrollwork, floral designs, and a banner that reads "Je Main Tiendray" (I Will Maintain), the motto of the Orange-Nassau family, who patriarch, William of Orange, was then King of England. The coat of arms features a lion and a unicorn, the symbols of England and Scotland respectively, along with various other emblems and motifs.

The map itself is beautifully drawn, with carefully rendered coastlines, rivers, and other topographical
