Description:

This bird's-eye view map of Enkhuizen, created by Georg Braun and Frans Hogenberg, is from the Civitates Orbis Terrarum (Cities of the World), the first comprehensive atlas of town views.

Enkhuizen, located in the province of North Holland, is shown in intricate detail, including its streets, canals, and significant buildings. The map highlights the Zuiderkerk (Sint-Pancraskerk) and the Westerkerk (Sint-Gommaruskerk), two prominent 15th-century churches. The bustling seaport, protected by a fortified dam, reflects the city's historical significance in the maritime trade and its connection to the Dutch East India Company established in 1603. The IJsselmeer, filled with various ships, adds a dynamic element to the map. The windmills and cannons depicted on the walls provide a sense of the city's defenses against the ocean.
