Description:

The Second Map of the State of Connecticut Published in the United States

Hand annotated copy example of John Reid's map of Connecticut, the second earliest atlas map of Connecticut published in America (following Carey's map of 1795).

The map is divided into counties and shows early roads, towns, rivers, islands, etc.

The present example includes extensive annotations and coloring, both front and back, likely dating to the first decade of the 19th Century. The location of 8 additional towns are added. The road from New York to Danbury is added, as are several local roads radiating out from the Greenwich area.

Detailed Condition:

Minor toning and soiling.
