Description:

This 1897 map by Antonio García Cubas, published by Cadena y Ca and lithographed by Montauriol Sucesores, is a detailed portrayal of Oaxaca, Mexico. It was issued as part of the Atlas Geografico de los Estados Unidos Mexicanos, a comprehensive atlas comprising 30 maps detailing Mexican states, the Federal District, and territories of Baja California and Tepic. This 1897 edition is distinguished by a new silver border, enhancing its visual appeal.

Antonio García Cubas, the esteemed 19th-century Mexican cartographer, was instrumental in illustrating Mexico's geographical and cultural landscape during a period of national consolidation and identity formation.

The map depicts various types of settlements such as capitals of states, head towns of districts, villages, and municipalities, as well as haciendas, ranchos, and mineral-rich areas, denoted by a detailed legend of symbols.

The publishers of this edition seem to have intentionally obscured early imprint information with their new reflective silver border.

Detailed Condition:

Color lithograph on wove paper. The border printed in metallic-silver.
