Description:

The 1725 engraving "Gebedehuis Der Jooden" shows a Jewish synagogue. It features a large building with classical columns and a clear, structured design, typical of neoclassical architecture. This building is set in a calm landscape with rows of trees leading up to it, and hills in the background.

Inside the synagogue's courtyard, people can be seen interacting, suggesting a community space. Two individuals are depicted in the foreground, possibly entering or leaving the area. The scene portrays the synagogue as a central place for community and worship, placed within a peaceful setting.
