Description:

This 1897 map by Antonio García Cubas, published by Cadena y Ca and lithographed by Montauriol Sucesores, is a detailed portrayal of the state of Guanajuato, Mexico.

The map was issued as part of the Atlas Geografico de los Estados Unidos Mexicanos, a comprehensive atlas comprising 30 maps detailing Mexican states, the Federal District, and territories of Baja California and Tepic. This 1897 edition is distinguished by a new silver border, enhancing its visual appeal.

Antonio García Cubas, the esteemed 19th-century Mexican cartographer, was instrumental in illustrating Mexico's geographical and cultural landscape during a period of national consolidation and identity formation.

The map depicts various types of settlements such as capitals of states, head towns of districts, villages, and municipalities, as well as haciendas, ranchos, and mineral-rich areas, denoted by a detailed legend of symbols.

Includes the Central Railroad and a railroad under construction.
