Description:

Isaaq Tirion's map depicting the region from Lisbon to the Strait of Gibraltar, published in Amsterdam in 1759, is a fine example of 18th-century cartography.

The map includes a detailed representation of the southwestern coast of the Iberian Peninsula, including the cities and coasts of Portugal and southern Spain. It likely includes navigational details such as depth soundings and anchorage points.

Includes Lisbon, Cadiz ("Cadix"), Gibraltar, and Cueta.

The map is a testament to the Dutch expertise in cartography during this period, characterized by precise measurements and an aesthetic blend of utility and artistry.

Detailed Condition:

Engraving on 18th-century laid paper. Original hand-color. Paperclip rust spot in the upper right corner.
