Description:

Very Rare Late State

Great two-sheet map of Scotland, showing the northern part of Great Britain from Durham north to the Orkneys, based upon the surveys and Timothy Pont and updates for the recent surveys of Robert Gordon.

Fabulously decorated in the Sanson style typical of the mid-17th century, the map includes a remarkable amount of detail showing the many hills, rivers, lochs, towns, and more of the low and highlands.

The split between the upper and the lower sheet occurs near Lochaber and Aberdeen, with minor overlapping regions. Each map includes its own scale bar and cartouche. In all, a great 17th-century representation of Scotland.

Rarity

The 2-sheet map is scarce, but this set, dated 1740 and 1741, is especially so.
