Description:

Fascinating map showing the voyage of Lopez Van De Sampayo, the Governor of the Portugese possessions in India. The map extends from Madagascar to the west coast of America, centered on a bizzarely shaped Hollandia Nova and Quir Regio (New Zealand?). Sampayo is often said to be the first person to bring the Tulip back to Europe, from Sri Lanka, bu this theory is highly questioned. In the early 18th Century, Vander Aa reproduced a number of rare manuscript and printed accounts of 16th Century Travel to America and included marvelous decorative maps, which were typically based upon contemporary cartographic information. Many of the earliest voyages of exploration which are impossibly rare to find in the original editions can be found in Vander Aa's works, which are now becoming increasing rare. This example is in an attractive full wash color.
