Description:

Detailed map of North America, which is an odd mix of information. While the map is colored to show the 1846 borders of the US, there are numerous details that date from 1825-1840. Upper California includes the Rio Buenaventura and Rio Sacramento or Timpanagos, flowing from the Pacific to Lake Timpanagos (Salt Lake) and the mythical Lake Teguayo, features that were being removed from the map following Fremont's expedition in the early 1840s. Texas is shown in a Stovepipe configuration, and Iowa Territory is shown extending to the Canadian Border, a tell-tale sign of a pre-1840 map. The double wide Arkansas configuration is also in evidence, although truncated, and Missouri Territory dominates the Plains and Upper Missouri Valley. While the boundary of 1848 is noted with Mexico, pre-dating Gadsden, virtually nothing else has been updated. While the map is noted as exhibiting the recent discoveries, the reality is that it is a text book of older Transmississippi West details. Despite its dated quality, the detail of the map is impressive.
