Description:

Rare first state of Basset's map showing the theater of war in America during the American Revolution.

The map covers the region from Newfoundland to northern Florida, and west as Lake Michigan. There is a large inset of southern New England and New York, eastern Pennsylvania and all of New Jersey that features the region most affected by the Revolution in 1779. The map is filled with topographical information, boundaries, cities, towns, forts, Indian territory and villages, battlefields, trails and roads.

The large title cartouche includes a battle scene, the personification of America as an Indian queen and the royal British coat of arms. The map was separately published by Basset.

Washed and archivally backed, but generally a nice example.
