Description:

Rare separately issued map of the Mid-Atlantic theater of the American Civil War, published in Boston by Mayer & Co.

The map extends south to Fredericksburg and Fairfax and north to Harrisburg and Reading and East to Philadelphia and Delaware Bay, centered on Washington, Baltimore and Harper's Ferry. The map shows the towns, roads and railroads of the region in fine detail. A note below Gettysburg identifies the Battlefield of July 2 & 3.

This type of map was very popular during the War, with the public in America and Europe having a virtually endless appetite for new maps depicting the regions which were then seeing conflict.

OCLC locates 3 copies (Harvard, Penn State and Library of Congress). We note also the copy at the Boston Public Library.

Detailed Condition:

Flattened and backed with thin layer of Japan paper. A few minor folds splits and minor losses, expertly repaired on verso.
