Description:

A nice example of Moll's map of the British, French and Spanish regions of North America, reduced from his landmark Sasquahanna Village map. The map, which appeared in Moll's Atlas Minor, is one of the smaller format English maps of the period, with dozens of place names throughout. The map predates the Georgia Colony, with Carolina extending south to Florida. A number of the French and British Forts in the US and Great Lakes regions appear. The detail along the Mississippi is excellent, showing Indiana Names, settlements, forts, trading posts, etc., although the Mississippi itself is misprojected to the West. The detail in Texas and New Mexico is also nice for the period, with an area listed as parts unknown and a reference to Lahontan's Lake and River System in the upper left corner. A marvelous map, showing the best of contemporary cartography in the early 18th Century.
