Description:

Fine large format map of Florida, published shortly after its admission to the Union on March 3, 1845.

The map is by far the most detailed and accurate map of Florida to date, including the progress of the General Land Office surveys and several of the early Land Grants. Numerous forts, military camps, counties, early roads, towns, lakes rivers, etc. Curiously the map is still divided between East Florida and West Florida.

A note in the western Everglades marks the "district assigned to the Seminoles by the arrangement of Gen. Macomb May 18th 1839" and further remarks "N.B. 20 miles around this district is reserved from survey till the Seminoles are removed."

Joseph Goldsborough Bruff was a civilian draftsman and artist with the Bureau of Topographical Engineers. He participated in the California Gold Rush, and also worked on the United States Capitol as a designer and draftsman. Bruff's earliest important map was issued by Henry S. Tanner in 1839, and was of the lands ceded by Indian tribes to the U.S. government by treaty, and lands occupied by the tribes. Bruff went on to produce important maps during the Mexican War (of the Isthmus of Tehuantepec) and the Civil
