Description:

Detailed map of Russia and Alaska, which appeared in an undetermined French publication circa 1790,, possibly the Annales du Voyages, for which Tardieu was a regular engraver of maps.

The map shows the results of the recent Russian, Spanish and British discoveries along the coastline of Alaska, most notably, those of Captain James Cook in 1779, which are identifies in the map.

The map locates Port Buccareli and Port Remedios, the points reached by the Spanish at the end of the 18th Century, along with noting other early observations by Cook and the River of the West, discovered in 1603.

An interesting map, published on the eve of the expeditions of La Perouse, Vancouver and others along the Northwest Coast of America.

Detailed Condition:

Minor soiling, primarily in the blank margins
