Description:

Attractive 18th-century manuscript map in ink and watercolor.

The map proclaims to show the first and last parts of the action of "Feldmarschal Konigseg" in Tyrol. That being said, the map seems largely imaginary. The Brenta River is certainly real, but it is relatively short and is in the Veneto. Neither the towns of Clausn, Canezio, and Brankafora (or Branka Fora), nor "Mont Fienazo" map to a real location we have been able to identify. Selva is a town in Tyrol, but the geography around it is nothing like what is shown on this map.

A curious and attractive piece of hand-drawn mapmaking.

The key in the lower-left corner alludes to French and Croatian soldiers among other things.

Detailed Condition:

Minor marginal soiling. Some reinforcement on verso to old greens.
