Description:

Trade With China Following The Boxer Rebellion

Detailed Statistical Map of China, published by the U.S. Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor.

The map examines the primary trading ports in China, Hong Kong and the Philippines, illustrating primary trade routes, railroad lines, proposed railroad lines, telegraphs, cable, canals and navigable rivers.

The map reflects the trade activity in China in the years immediately after the Boxer Rebellion, with the Americans, British, French, Italians and Germans all controlling the railways, as noted on the map.
