Description:

A finely detailed example Mortier's edition of Philippe de la Rue's map of Asia Minor also known as the Anatolian peninsula, or the Anatolian plateau, which makes up the majority of modern-day Turkey.

The map is centered on Ascanius Lacus (Lake Iznik) and details the region bounded by the Black Sea to the north, the Mediterranean Sea to the south, and the Aegean Sea to the west. Armenia and Syria are detailed in the east. The map also includes the islands of Cypress, Crete, Rhodes, Cos, etc.

Fine topographical details are noted throughout the region including mountain ranges, lakes, rivers, pathways, etc. The map also features a decorative cartouche.
