Description:

From An Atlas Designed To Educate A Future King of England

A decorative map of ancient Germany, containing ample notes regarding the region's past classical histories. Geographical representations of such things as the boundaries of the Roman Empire, the distributions of certain tribes, and place names given by Caesar abound.

The map includes a decorative title cartouche and the royal coat of arms.

This map was part of an atlas dedicated to the Duke of Gloucester, who was then attending school in Oxford. Unfortunately, the Duke would die at age 11.
