Description:

Scarce pocket map of the eastern portion of Florida, published by J.H. Colton.

The map is divided by into counties and townships. There are certain sections in the southern part of the State which are not yet subdivided into townships. Counties are outlined in green, yellow and pink. Other geographical entities include towns, lakes, rivers, bays, and coastal islands.

The map highlights the progress of the surveys of the General Land Office in Florida, now nearly completed except in the wetlands and swamps in the Lake Okeechobee region.

There are no railroads in the southernmost part of the State, reaching only Orlando by 1881. By 1884, the same map will show the railroad reaching Tampa.
