Description:

First state of Rossi's double hemisphere map of the world, published in Rome.

The map is based upon the influential world map of Nicolas Sanson, the single most important French mapmaker of the 17th Century. His modernistic approach to cartography would redefine commercial cartography over the next 50 years and signal the beginning and end, of Dutch domination, of the commercial map trade.

Rossi published this scarce World Map in his Mercurio Geographico . . ., first published in 1674. In 1684, the map was revised. Most notably, a more complete and defined coastline for the unknown southern continent was included.
