Description:

Highly important early map of Michigan Territory, being the first separate map of Michigan Territory published outside of the United States.

Virtually no settlements in the interior and the upper peninsula, with most of the towns concentrated on the southeast border. The remainder is Indian Territory, with notes on Portages. Includes Indian Settlements, and a view of early counties, including Monroe, Oakland, DeWayne and Macomb. Early roads shown and some settlements on Lake St. Claire and Lake Erie, along with Ft Brown and Camp Smith, south of Green Bay.

The map is surrounded by text describing Michigan Territory in French.

The map appeared in the earliest comprehensive atlas of the Americas published in Europe after the American Revolution.
