Description:

One of the earliest obtainable maps of the Galapagos Islands, published 100 years prior to Charles Darwin's visit.

Bowen's map of South America is one of only a few obtainable separate maps of the Galapagos Islands published in the 18th Century.

The map includes an extensive note on the origin of the name Galapagos (named for the Tortoises which use the island to lay their eggs) and the Spanish and English contacts with Island, subsequent to its
