Description:

Detailed Soviet 1:100,000 map of Berlin, used during the Red Army encirclement of the city in the Battle of Berlin.

The map covers several hundred square kilometers around Berlin, at the center is the city, labeled in Russian ("Берлин"). To the south of the city, the Soviet front, as of April 1945, marked in several places in the Berlin suburbs.

The Red Army was forced to quickly update its maps of Germany-proper as the speed of the German collapse accelerated in early 1945. The present map was issued in 1942.

Detailed Condition:

Old folds, with some attendant wear. Minor toning in a few spots.
