Description:

The Northeastern quadrant of Covens & Mortier's four-sheet edition of Popple's seminal map of North America, widely regarded as one of the two most important maps of North America produced in the 18th century (along with the Mitchell Map). Unlike Popple and Mitchell, Covens & Mortier produced their four-sheet map in such a way that each of the constituent sheets works independently as a separate map.

The map covers the Eastern Seaboard of the present-day United States from South Carolina into Canada. The colonies carry their mid-18th century configurations.

The map also has interesting coverage of the St. Lawrence - Quebec is shown as the largest city on the map - and Lake Champlain is presented in a very irregular form.
