Description:

Herman Moll's regional map of Belgium and Luxembourg, showing its political affiliations during the time of its creation.

The map provides an expansive and finely detailed presentation of the region, extending from the North Sea coast of Belgium to the heartland of the Netherlands. The map encompasses Flanders, or what was known as the Austrian Netherlands during the 18th century, along Luxembourg and the Bishopric of Liege.

Moll's map is exceptionally detailed. It boasts an intricate mesh of towns, roads, rivers, and other geographical features, bringing to life the vibrant tapestry of this historically significant region. Cities and towns are meticulously marked with minuscule icons, each significant in their representation. Major cities like Antwerp, Bruges, and Ghent, along with numerous smaller towns, are discernible, hinting at the region's urban richness.
