Description:

Important Early Map of Montana Territory

Fine early map of Montana Territory, published by the General Land Office in 1887.

The map provides exceptional detail in the surveyed regions of Montana Territory, but also highlights just how much of Montana was as yet unexplored, unsurveyed and largely unmapped, other than primitive details on watershed and topography. The detail in the map, based upon the most up to date government surveys, was the best available information to the General Land Office at the time of publication.

Includes a key showing the offices of the Surveyor General, Land Offices, Townships which have been subdivided, county seats, boundaries of land districts, railroads, military reservations, and Indian Reservations. Several Indian Treaties are also noted.

The area in gold shows the proposed extension of the Northern Cheyenne Reservation, based upon a proposal made in 1886.

Yosemite appears at the bottom of the map, just a few years after it became a National Park.
