Description:

Fine early Hal Shelton Poster, promoting Vail, Colorado.

Iconic promotional poster of Vail, published shortly after its opening in 1962.

The view shows the resort as viewed from the north. The map pre-dates Gondola #2 and the expansion of Vail's skiable terrain to the west of the original area, centered on Gondola 1.

The top image is a large traditional trail map, identifying ski lifts, trails, bowls, etc. with the village of Vail at the base. A second smaller image is centered on High Noon ridge and a single lift servicing a number of open bowls. Each of the views were painted by pioneering American ski artist Hal Shelton:

Vail Colorado . . . Ski Country USA (an early edition!)

"The first notable ski map artist in North America was a California native named Hal Shelton, born in 1916. During his early career Shelton worked as a cartographer for the U.S. Geological Survey, and is known for his innovative ideas regarding natural color maps and contour shading (Patterson & Kelso 2004). By the early 1960s Shelton was an established cartographer living in Colorado at the epicenter of the ski resort construction frenzy. Shelton's professional training in cartography, user-friendly mapping techniques, and ideal location in Colorado provided him with the perfect credentials to create impressive maps for the new resorts.... Shelton hand-painted panoramas for several world-class resorts including Bear Valley, Alta, and Mammoth.... His paintings are characterized by a realistic color palette, thick brushstrokes for background features, and individually painted trees in the foreground.... Shelton's work was well-received, and he dominated the ski mapping industry in the western United States for much of the 1960s and 70s." (Lippus, pp. 50-51)

This poster was issued as part of Vail's membership in Colorado Ski Country USA, a non-profit promotional cohort formed in in 1965.
