Description:

Famous 16th-century allegorical scene commemorating the discovery of America.

This is the De Bry edition of the image originally drawn by Johannes Stradanus, a Flemish artist living in Italy, which was first engraved by Adrian Collaert for Galle's Americae Retectio in 1585. The image was also re-issued in 1592 to commemorate the 100th Anniversary of Columbus's discovery of the New World.

portraits of Vespucci and Columbus appear above this scene, and Magellan is alluded to by the indication of Magellanica on the globe. Portraits of Columbus and Vespucci are shown above. The globe shows the world on an inverse projection, with America on the right. The entirety of South America, the Caribbean, Central America, and the Eastern Part of North America can be seen, extending to the southern tip of Greenland.

A nice example in full color, from a De Bry re-issue of the image.
