Detailed map of Southeast Asia, bounded by Taiwan in the north, Cambodia, the Straits of Malacca, Sumatra the northwest coast of Australia, and the Ladrones, and centered on the Philippines. The map is attractively designed according to 17th-century French sensibilities, including a simple neoclassical cartouche and artfully understated detail.

The map shows the Philippines, Indonesia, and the Malaysian Peninsula naming cities and more. Ihor (Jahor) is named, and the "Sincapura" River is named. Place names are included in Taiwan.

This was one of the earliest maps of the region printed in a French atlas.
