Description:

Fine example of a late state of Nicolas Sanson's double-page engraved map of the northern part of Lower Saxony, originally published in Paris in the middle of the 17th-century and here reissued in 1690.

The map stretches from the North Sea near the outflow of the Elbe River to central Germany, showing Wittenberg near Berlin. The map names Hamburg, Bremen, and Hanover.

Detail on the map is extensive, with many rivers, forests, cities, towns, and other geographical features shown. A cartouche in the upper right shows French decorative elements of the era.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color in outline. Minor centerfold toning.
