Description:

Fine, French map of the region to the east of Lyon and the Rhone River, extending into Piedmont, in Italy, and the start of Switzerland.

The map utilizes Latin toponyms for some of the features shown on the map. For example, Lyon, at the confluence of the Saone and Rhone, is named Lugdunum. Other cities shown include Geneva, Turin (Taurinin), and Grenoble (Gratianopolis).

The map includes fine detail showing mountains pictorially as well as rivers, and many other features. Double crosses and single crosses over cities reflect centers of the church, while a tilted cross symbol (indicated in the legend) shows Carthusian monasteries.

This map was published in Paris by Guillaume de L'Isle at the start of the 18th century.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color, in outline. Dampstains at top of map. Burn mark in lower left. Slight loss just past neatline in lower left and lower right corners.
