Description:

A detailed map of the United States in 1816, showing the states and territories east of the Mississippi and the part of the newly acquired Louisiana Territory.

Georgia still extends to the Mississippi, although the western two-thirds is primarily Indian tribes and villages. The Western Territory is comprised of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio, which is still not shown. Western Territory is also dominated by Indian Territories and early forts. Iowa Town appears on the Mississippi along with numerous notes on either side of the River and up the Missouri. Includes towns, roads, rivers, mountains, lakes and other details.

An excellent early 19th Century map of the US, during the period of greatest changes east of the Mississippi.
