Description:

Fine example of Seutter's strong impression that highlights Seutter's combination plan and prospect of Jerusalem.

The top image is a plan of the ancient city after Villalpando's plan. The bottom image provides a striking birdseye view, which follows the image of Matthaus Merian.

The upper image includes a key location 47 points of interest, with 8 points noted in the lower view.

Born in Augsburg and a son of a goldsmith, Seutter was an apprentice to Johann Baptist Homann, a renowned atlas maker, whom he eventually replaced as the official geographer to the Kaiser of the Holy Roman Empire.
