Description:

Nice antique map of New York, as it was in the 17th century, showing Manhattan, Staten Island, and part of Long Island. This map was engraved to illustrate a French edition of J. Fenimore Cooper's The Water-Witch.

The map is beautifully engraved and shows a nice level of detail for the region. Broadway is shown connecting Manhattan to Harlem. A prison in New York is shown. Settlements on Long Island are named.

This map was part of an illustrated French set of J. Fenimore Cooper's works that included a number of maps. This map accompanies The Water-Witch, Cooper's 1830 novel set during the 17th century that covers the abduction of a woman by a pirate. The route of the ship described in the novel is shown on the map.

Detailed Condition:

Original hand-color in outline. Minor staining and some uneven toning.
