Description:

Rand McNally's large 19th-century map of Maine, focusing on the state's county borders, railroads, and rivers.

The map is highly detailed and attractively printed in red and black. Many cities and towns are named throughout, and all counties are delimited. Railroads are listed, and, very interestingly, the populations of the chief cities of the state appear to the right of the map.

Detailed Condition:

Lower right corner trimmed. Minor tear in lower left.
