Description:

Intriguing separately-issued promotional map of West Texas, focusing on two oil royalties in Presidio County, and comparing them with producing oil fields to the northeast.

The map has nothing in the way of identifying marks that would allow us to identify the maker, but it was probably produced around 1926, probably for a Fort Worth-based oil speculation firm.

An interesting artifact from the speculative early days of West Texas oil exploration.

Detailed Condition:

Minor toning but overall VG+
