Description:

America's Rotarians and How To Find Them

Detailed map showing the districts of Rotary International within the United States as of July 1, 1958. This map is designed with a focus on delineating the administrative divisions of the Rotary Club's organization across different states and regions.

The map is a monochromatic illustration with clear demarcation of district boundaries, each labeled with a distinct three-digit number. The numbering system seems to be a method of identifying individual Rotary districts for organizational purposes.

The representation includes the contiguous states of the U.S., with Alaska depicted in an inset in the lower right corner, acknowledging its geographical separation and recent statehood in 1958. Hawaii is also shown in a separate inset next to Alaska, indicating its districts.
