Description:

This antique map by Alain Manesson Mallet is a 17th-century French map of the American Southeast. It includes the towns of St. Mathieu and St. Augustin in Florida and labels "Canada ou Nouvelle France". A network of rivers on the map approximates what were the actual river systems of the south.

The map also features several different spellings of the Appalachian Mountains, highlighting the variation in naming conventions of the time. Overall, this map is a valuable artifact for studying the cartographic history of the region.

The map is based largely upon the earlier maps of Sanson and Du Val.
