Description:

Engraved for d'Anville's Nouvel Atlas de la Chine, de la Tartarie Chinoise et du Thibet, depicting Qing Dynasty China, this map shows the area from the Selingue Pira (Selenga River) east to the route from Beijing (Peking) to Niptchou (Nerchinsk), encompassing the Left Flank Khalkha Mongol khanates. The site of the Battle of Jao Modo is shown along the Toula (Tuul) river ("Défaite du Caldan par l'Armee de Canghi"), 37 miles east of present-day Ulaanbaatar. The routes of major military campaigns in the area are shown, including that of Alaqush Tegin Quri (here, Tagin), traveling along the Kerlon (Kherlen River) towards the Orgon (Orkhon) River

A line of text across the center describes the surrender of the Khalkha Mongols to the Qing Dynasty in 1691 and the formation of Outer Mongolia into thirteen administrative banners.
