Description:

Detailed and attractive map of the German Empire, with three large attractive cartouches, published by Philippe Buache in 1745.

Originally published in the early 18th Century by French mapmaker, Guillaume De L'Isle, this map of the Holy Roman Empire provides a detailed view of the geography and political divisions of the region at that time.

The map shows the Holy Roman Empire, the main power center of central Europe from the 9th to the 19th centuries, which included much of what is now Germany, Austria, the Czech Republic, and parts of surrounding countries.

De L'Isle's maps are known their accuracy and attention to detail, and it includes a wealth of information about the political and geographic features of the Holy Roman Empire, including cities, rivers, mountains, and borders. It is considered an important resource for historians studying this period of European history.
