Description:

This detailed woodcut map, created by Martin Waldseemüller for his Geographie, depicts Central Europe, spanning from Denmark to the Alps and from France to Poland.

This map is part of Waldseemüller's modern map series, which were twenty new regional maps he made to accompany the traditional twenty-seven Ptolemaic maps derived from the 1482 Ulm edition. His atlas, titled Geographie Opus Novissima Traductione e Grecorum Archetypis, was published by Johann Schott in Strasbourg in 1513 and is considered one of the most important editions of Ptolemy atlases. In 1520, a second edition of the atlas was printed by Schott using the same woodcut blocks, and it was reissued in 1522 to 1541 by Laurent Fries and Johannes Grüniger with size-reduced maps.
